Be part of a campaign that inspires domestic audiences and drives tourism demand.

Fáilte Ireland's Find Yourself on a Short Break campaign puts rejuvenation at its heart.

When life gets hectic, people crave simple moments that help them reset and reconnect.

The campaign encourages us to take the short break we need – reminding us that real rejuvenation is often just a short journey away.

For tourism businesses, this creates a strong opportunity to highlight the unique, restorative experiences Ireland offers – great local food, welcoming stays, outdoor escapes, and memorable local moments that help visitors feel renewed.

Find yourself on a short break

A campaign rooted in a simple, universal need:
rejuvenation.

Small shifts in life can have a big effect.
The feeling of waking up somewhere different.

Looking out on a new landscape.
Moving your body.
Breathing fresh air.
Laughing with friends.

Tasting something
you've never eaten before.
Having a moment
that's genuinely yours.

It's the quickest, simplest way to refill the tank.

This campaign highlights how stepping away for just a couple of days reminds you how it feels to clear your mind, restore your energy, and experience the simple joy of time away in Ireland.

Tips on language

Language has the power to inspire, captivate and create deep emotional connection. Our words should place people in the moment and let them experience the rejuvenation it brings.

Avoid being too literal:

Don't say 'Find yourself climbing'

Do say 'Find yourself on top of things'

Don't say 'Find yourself in the city'

Do say 'Find yourself in your element'

Remember—when writing your own content and headlines, always prioritise:

- ✓ FEELING
over location
- ✓ FEELING
over activity
- ✓ FEELING
over stating the obvious

How it all comes together

The industry campaign logo may be used across your website, social channels, and promotional materials to align your business with the national campaign, while maintaining your own brand presence.

Here are some examples of local businesses implementing the logo across social.

How we show up on social:

Choose the correct version of the logo for the asset you are creating to ensure good visibility.

Use the black version on lighter-coloured backgrounds; use the white version on darker images.

Position the logo in the bottom-left or bottom-right corner, ensuring strong contrast with the background for clear visibility and brand consistency.

2. Bring your story to life with imagery

Below we share some tips to help you capture your own imagery that would align to the campaign.

1 Choose moments that feel real

Use images that feel candid and authentic—people laughing freely, discovering something new, pausing to take in the view, or simply savouring the moment. These genuine, everyday scenes make it easier for audiences to picture themselves right there in the experience.

2 Draw on Ireland's natural textures and distinctive atmosphere

Ireland's landscapes, weather, and cosy corners add character. Think soft light, sea spray, greenery or colourful streets. These details help create the calm, rejuvenating feeling at the heart of the campaign.

3 Keep things simple and natural

Use natural light wherever possible to keep images feeling warm, honest, and true to the moment. Avoid heavy filters, excessive retouching, or overly polished finishes that can make photos feel staged or artificial.

4. List your business

Your Discoverireland.ie or Visitdublin.com business listing is a great way to showcase your business to a wide audience of potential visitors. Together these websites attract over 4 million visitors each year, making them a powerful platform to be present on.

Make sure the information you include is accurate and relevant, and choose the best images to promote your business. The more informative your listing, the more potential visitors can start to understand why your business should be top of their list of places to visit and experience.
